This Town Hall is sponsored by Learning Rights Law Center and Loyola Marymount University School of Education.

A parent is a child's best advocate so Learning Rights offers TIGER Trainings using a hands-on, method for self-advocacy training. Parents learn in TIGER how to become self-advocate for their children and their community. The TIGER Program started with 10 families in December 2005 supported by Capitol Group Companies Charitable Foundation and has grown to reach over 150 families from 15 school districts throughout Los Angeles County. The program uses a multidisciplinary approach to self-advocacy training. Dr. Tisa Aceves, Loyola Marymount University Special Education Professor collaborates with Learning Rights to design and teach the program.
